MANAGEMENT PREVIEW

Performance Management

An indicator of this person's performance expectations as they relate to managing a sales force.

Leadership Style

A measurement of a person's natural leadership style and approach with others.

Training & Development

The natural inclination to train and develop new representatives.

Recruiting/Attraction

The potential to attract a high volume of recruits.

OVERALL PREVIEW

An overall assessment of this individual's potential as a sales manager.

SELECTION CONSIDERATIONS

Enterprising Potential (E.P.): In competitive business environments, her strength on the E.P. Scale would indicate a strong potential for basic survival. She should have a very strong natural inclination towards being a self-manager. Given formal training in planning and time management skills, she should be able to make a routine of the daily effort required to maintain the basic contact activities essential for survival in demanding business opportunities.

Achievement Potential (A.P.): This is an acceptable result on the A.P. Scale. This level of A.P. Scale results predicts the potential for eventual higher than average performance. She has a strong need for achievement and she will be anxious to finish any training requirements and get started at the job.

Independence Potential (I.P.): This is a strong score on the I.P. Scale. In the job for which she is being considered, if you can eventually offer her an opportunity to work in a very independent way, assuming that she has earned the right to do so through demonstrated performance, then she may be able to express her independence productively. If your operation is such that tight supervision and control are and remain in place indefinitely, problems will occur. She would be essentially a 'maintenance free' employee from a supervisory standpoint once she has moved out of the initial training and supervision framework.

People Orientation (P.O.): This is an acceptable result on the P.O. Score. Generally a result like this has no bearing, either positive or negative, on selection recommendations.

Investigative Orientation (INV.): This is an average to low average result on the INV. Score. If she has successfully completed some program of training in the last few years, this will be an indication that she should be able to succeed at most basic training programs.

Call Reluctance

Sample is quite comfortable prospecting and managing call reluctance. She would also enjoy the challenge of prospecting and selling in her natural market. She would require only minimal support to deal with call reluctance.

Managing Rejection: Her high score on the managing rejection scale indicates that she would tend to perceive the sales process in a very objective manner. She would be primarily focused on identifying client needs rather than on how the client was responding to her personally during the sales process. She would benefit from training to become consciously aware of this competence. She is very unlikely to confuse a client's feelings about the product with feelings toward her personally.

Prospecting Orientation: Sample would tend to be reluctant to approach specific contacts in her natural market and might avoid business networking at both formal and informal social gatherings. She would need coaching on the benefits of consistent prospecting and networking. An extremely strong commitment to product and a well developed sales track would be prerequisites to consistent activity and high level performance.

Commitment to a Sales Career: She has a very positive image about salespeople and a sales career. From a motivational perspective, a manager can facilitate very high performance levels by reinforcing this concept during early training and throughout the developmental process. Her self-esteem levels, which will dictate her expectation levels, will be based to a great extent on her career and will not easily be impacted by rejection.

TRAINING & COACHING SUGGESTIONS

Based on the Enterprising Potential (E.P.) Results

(Coaching Suggestions) Maximize existing strengths through training in basic personal time management and activity planning skills. Develop specific job related task planning and self management skills. Train her in these areas and monitor her planning and her activities until she demonstrates consistency. She can and will work best if you focus on the management of her EFFORT.

Based on the Achievement Potential (A.P.) Results

(Coaching Suggestions) Since she has the energy and ambition to succeed, she will profit from training in closing techniques so that she may apply that energy and ambition effectively. You will find that she will learn her best techniques for persistence in closing by being trained by someone who has a style of approach which fits well with her own personality.

Based on the Independence Potential (I.P.) Results

(Coaching Suggestions) She may resent the fact that you feel she must be trained. However, coaching certainly is necessary to ensure that she expends her energies in as productive a fashion as possible. The training should be aimed at getting her into the field as soon as possible.

Based on the People Orientation (P.O.) Results

(Coaching Suggestions) She will find satisfaction and productivity enhanced by working with a trainer and fellow employees who are similarly people oriented.

Based on the Investigative Orientation (INV.) Results

(Training Suggestions) Don't just assume that if she has the books and materials that she will learn the content. Probably she should be monitored carefully through training to ensure that she does learn the necessary material.

RETENTION PROSPECTS

Based on the Enterprising Potential (E.P.) Results

She may balk at working within an overly structured work situation as she needs continuing opportunities to customize the job structure to make it her own. She will likely need little managing in the long run from the standpoint of structuring and organizing the work.

Based on the Achievement Potential (A.P.) Results

She could become bored with a job that is repetitious even if the outcome of the job is a good income. To stay with you in the long run, she will have to be challenged by both the performance demands of the job and by a requirement to develop new and creative business or personal opportunities for herself.

Based on the Independence Potential (I.P.) Results

Over the long run, she will almost certainly leave any work situation which is or which becomes too structured or too team oriented. She will insist on the freedom to do things in her own way and at her own pace.

Based on the People Orientation (P.O.) Results

She needs and will be motivated in large measure by acceptance and recognition from her boss and fellow employees.

Based on the Investigative Orientation (INV.) Results

It is likely that she would find it a disincentive having a constant pressure to learn new material and/or new methods.

An Overview of Your Personal Characteristics & Career Strengths

Personal Strengths/Career Needs	1
What to Seek/What to Avoid in Jobs	2

#POP7 for Sample Person on 2009/04/21

In Terms of Enterprising vs Support Role Possibilities

You would be described as extremely competitive, enterprising, assertive, aggressive, tough minded, determined and goal oriented. You may display new and creative ways to reach your personal and work objectives and you will be self-evaluative and sometimes critical of your own performance. Given an aim, objective or requirement, you would be able to develop your own plan, manage your time and focus your effort on a daily basis to reach your goals. Being a self-manager should come very naturally to you and these skills should be refined through formal training and/or on-the-job experience.

In Terms of Your Style & Strength of Various Motivations

People would see you as being an achieving person, one who can be quite hard driving, eager, active and occasionally impatient. Challenge for you can involve doing some things simply because they are demanding, and many things because they have a concrete financial reward, but you will occasionally accept a challenge because it has a 'people-oriented' element to it. Financial rewards are important to you but sometimes you direct your energies towards things which have no payoff for you but which have the 'people-oriented' focus. You evaluate how well you are doing in life and in your career by what you earn, by how you feel about yourself and by the good you have done for others.

In Terms of Your Independence vs Your Need to Be in the 'Team'

You would be described as quite strong-minded, stubborn, demanding, firm, independent and resolute. You would be innovative in certain circumstances to achieve your objectives and tend to seek some additional responsibilities in your job and personal life. You would accept minimal supervision but it would be difficult for a supervisor to guide or closely supervise you over an extended period of time.

In Terms of Your Orientation Towards the 'People' Side of Business

You would be described as quite sociable, enthusiastic, cheerful, genial and outgoing. You would enjoy personal relationships and interactions, and would make a good company representative in terms of customer satisfaction and personal and company public image. You might be very sensitive to rejection in some circumstances.

In Terms of Your Orientation Towards Technical & Practical Concerns

You would be described as somewhat logical, reflective, analytical, factual and practical. Intellectual challenges, when offered just as challenges without any obvious practical utility, would not appeal to you as strongly as would other kinds of challenges and opportunities. Ideas and concepts which were of solid practical use would be of interest to you.

What Should You Look for In a Job/Career that Matches You Best?

- + Look for opportunities to create your own work structure and to develop your self-management skills by training in time management and activity planning. The opportunity to put solid effort into the job each day is a real plus for you as you know that effort invested consistently will produce the results you seek in both productivity and recognition.
- + Look for a career path in which there is challenge that you evaluate to have importance as a way of earning a good income, as a way of proving yourself and which contains some real 'people-oriented' values in it.
- + Make sure that any new position which requires you to accept close supervision and control initially will have those controls removed when you demonstrate through performance that you no longer need the help.
- + You should look for employment that provides you with people contact or some public relations opportunities. You derive satisfaction from interaction with other people in both personal and work environments.
- + Look for employment that has a limited amount of analytical, technical and discovery learning to it. There are other challenges and rewards in the work environment which are more appealing to you. When you discover these, target them as ideal job requirements/opportunities.

What Should You Avoid in Jobs/Careers that Don't Match You?

- Avoid tightly and rigidly structured work situations. If there is no room to put your personal touch to work in organizing and managing yourself, the job may become too constricting for you. Try to avoid jobs that may limit your self-management skills development which is a very strong need in you for your personal productivity and your sense of satisfaction with any job.
- Avoid positions which are essentially non-challenging and repetitive or which you evaluate as being without real social merit. Even some apparently strongly challenging kinds of jobs may not satisfy you if they lack real human values in their purpose.
- Avoid career paths which have vague supervisory requirements or which expect you to accept continuing and close supervision for a prolonged period of time. You would eventually rebel at too much and too close supervision.
- You should avoid employment in jobs that have only limited feedback from others. You should also not be in situations that isolate you from others.
- Avoid jobs that are particularly detail oriented. Jobs that require you to quickly learn and apply new technologies or vast amounts of new information won't be particularly satisfying.
